Dr. Robert W. Davis

Rob Davis is the Instrumental Music Instructor and Director of Bands at Lower Columbia College. Before coming to LCC, Rob graduated magna cum laude with Bachelor and Master degrees in music from Brigham Young University, and went on to teach horn and music theory at BYU. He subsequently earned a Doctor of Musical Arts degree from the University of Southern California under Hollywood's leading studio horn player, James Thatcher. While at USC, Rob was honored to receive the Pi Kappa Lambda National Music Honor Society's Outstanding Musical and Academic Achievement Award.

A prize-winner in five national solo and chamber music competitions, Rob has performed with the Utah Symphony, the Utah Chamber Orchestra, the Orchestra at Temple Square, and numerous theatrical orchestras. He has also played on over 100 recording studio projects for films, television programs, advertisements, and video games.

Rob has performed in concert with a diverse array of musicians, including Frederica von Stade, The King's Singers, Peter Cetera, Debbie Reynolds, Lone Star, Lucy Lawless, and Jason Castro from American Idol. Performance tours have taken Rob to Italy, Germany, Slovenia, Greece, England, Scotland, Wales, as well as numerous cities in the US.

An outdoor enthusiast and long-time admirer of the beautiful Pacific Northwest, Rob is thrilled to live in Washington with his wife, a professional violinist, and daughter.

A black and white photograph of an ornate opera house interior, showing the curved balcony railings and the dark, patterned curtains of the stage. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the architectural details.
